BOIL WATER ADVISORY UPDATE

April 15, 2021

The date of the boil water advisory started April 13 and will conclude when the Department of Public Health for the Province of New Brunswick lifts the boil water advisory. It takes two clear tests 24 hour apart from each other to be lifted. Note that testing takes 24 hours to complete. At the earliest, the boil water advisory may be lifted Friday morning, all depending on the clear test results.

Note again the only government body that can lift the boil water advisory is the Department of Public Health.
